THE ANNUAL

Foreword

The Annual Staff presents the C. H. S. Annual for 1934. This has been made possible by the help and cooperation of, not only the Senior Class, but the entire High School. We hope you will enjoy the Annual at this reading and that in future years it will serve as a book of memories of your High School activities and friends.

High School Song

TUNE: "ON WISCONSIN"

Onward, fellows, we must conquer
Fight for Creston High!
Brown and Gold expect a victory
Win for Creston High!
Honor, fame, and glory calling,
You must do your best.
So whate'er the contest
Win for Creston High!

Fight then, fellows, fight to conquer,
Fight for Creston High!
Never weary in the contest,
Win for Creston High!
Though the battle goes against you
You must stand and fight;
So whate'er the contest
Win for Creston High!

Senior Class Song 1934

TUNE: "THE BELLS OF ST. MARY'S"

VERSE I

*The days that we spent in
The High School are gone,
And memories surround us
As we wait for the dawn.
We'll always remember
As long as we're here,
The days filled with fun
And so full of good cheer.*

VERSE II

*And now we are starting
All over again:
We're planning the new things,
And we hope to win.
And unless all our dreams
Turn to castles in air,
I know we'll be striving
Our burden to bear.*

CHORUS

*We Seniors of Creston
Are saying goodbye
To Classmates, to Teachers,
To memories gone by.
And if in the future
Our footsteps should stray,
Then we shall all remember
High School Days.*

Senior Class Prophecy

In the year of 1944, I decided to visit my old friend and schoolday superintendent, Mr. W. J. Himes, and try to persuade him to accompany me on a tour, visiting all my senior classmates. He readily accepted my invitation; so we started the following week. I had kept a list of the whereabouts of each, so we had little difficulty in locating them.

Cleveland being so near home, we went there first. We visited Edna Gliem's little mansion in the suburbs. She was still single and slightly inclined toward old-maid-hood. From Edna's we went to the stadium and saw a game of league baseball. It was a remarkable game and will always remain in my memory. Harry Zimmerman was catching for the winning Indians. While we were at the game, we met the world-famous manager of the Indians, Raymond Schlegel.

From Cleveland we traveled on to New York City. We visited the palatial home of Doc Orr and Irene Peake, who were happily married. Doc was crooning over the radio at Radio City, taking Bing Crosby's place who had retired. Then we went to see a new Broadway show called "Dancing Babies," featuring Betty Myers and LaVonne Benjamin. The next evening we went to the Court House to hear a trial that was reputed to have been the most noted in the history of New York. I was surprised to see that the judge was none other than my old friend, Virginia Snyder.

Our next stop was Washington, D. C. We went to the White House to talk over old times with the new Democratic President, Bob Thompson. He was the same as he was in high school—very studious and serious minded.

Then we drove on to Columbus, Ohio, and interviewed Thelma Lehman and Chris Cameron, who were co-professors in Ohio State University.

We resumed our journey westward. On stopping to inspect the Miller-Keltz project in Death Valley, we were surprised to learn that they were irrigating this vast tract of desert by one of their new scientific experiments called "Invisible Water." They were confident that it would prove successful.

From Death Valley we went to Cheyenne, and saw a Rodeo. Relda Scholl had gained world fame by riding a wild stallion in this Rodeo. She certainly could ride a mean horse.

We then went to Reno, Nevada. While going past the divorce courts, we recognized Flossie Krause coming down the steps. We stopped and chatted for awhile. As she wiped a tear out of her eye, she told us that it was the fifth time she had been disappointed in matrimony.

We went on our westward course to California. We stopped in Los Angeles and attended a meeting at Angelus Temple. Harold Henry delivered a fiery message on "Why Men Leave Home." While at Los Angeles, we went out to the Airport to see Eileen Fetzer before she flew to New York, where she was going to start on a solo flight across the Atlantic. She took Bill and me for a little spin before she left; and take it from me, she sure could make that plane talk.

On our arrival in Hollywood we were treated royally by our friends who had gone into the movies and made good. Emerson Metsker had stepped into the shoes of Ed Wynn, and Lorna Mumaw made Zasu Pitts look for a hiding place. To our amazement, Leonard Showalter had taken the honor of being the world's greatest violinist from Rubinoff. Isabelle Buchanan and Lucille Johnson were in constant demand by all the large movie concerns. Alec Erdos was also in great demand, since Jimmy Durante had retired.

While dining at the "Mayfair," we renewed the acquaintance of Glenn S., who was playing first "sax" in the Vincent Lopez orchestra.

The thought that C. H. S. had produced such a renowned class made our return trip a pleasant one.

RUSSEL SCHMOLLINGER.

THE ANNUAL

Class History

As I was hastily looking through my books and magazines, I found one which was entitled "Our Class." I paused a moment to leaf through its pages and to my surprise I found in it the story of my high school days. How happy I was that after all these years I could delve into this book and recall great pleasures of my youth.

Upon turning the first page I beheld a group of 34 students looking very bright and diligent. Below the picture I saw the names of our first class officers. Homer Miller was president; Raymond Schlegel, vice president; Wayne Orr, treasurer; Betty Myers, secretary; and Class Adviser, Miss Studer. These people guided us successfully through all our trials and troubles our first year.

Turning a page I saw we had the misfortune of losing a few this year. Vivian Stout moved to Wooster, but in return Durant Lehman came from Orrville. But to our sorrow, Charles Showalter left us.

Activities interested our group and Harry Zimmerman and Charles Arnold were out working in basketball and baseball. Margaret Ecker and Irene Peake were out for girls' basketball. In music, James Patterson, Raymond Schlegel, Homer Miller, Glenn Sonnedecker, and Margaret Ecker represented us. We passed all the exams with a small casualty here and there, but we managed to be ready for another year.

Turning a few more pages, I came upon the word Sophomores. Here I found we had gained and had 35 upon our list. This year I saw we changed officers. James Patterson was elected president; Robert Thompson, vice president; Betty Myers, secretary; Russell Schmollinger, treasurer; and class adviser, Miss Studer. I glanced to the next page and saw a list of those lost and gained during this year. Rittman gave us Robert Thompson; Wooster, Lena Buchanan; Emerson Metsker from Canton; and lastly, I found my own name, a transfer from Leroy to Creston. But then, on the other side was a list of those leaving us—Paul Slater, Virgil Bowman, Charles Woodward, Sylvia Ramsier, Margaret Ecker, and Grant Ditch. Grant went to Burbank to become a school rival.

Again activities stepped in and we had an acceptable showing from our class. We enjoyed our parties at the first of the year; and in basketball we were represented by Charles Arnold, Harry Zimmerman, Grant Ditch, Glenn Sonnedecker, Wayne Orr, Homer Miller, and myself. Out of these Arnold, Zimmerman, Ditch, Miller and myself were out for the baseball squad.

One happening was a great honor for our class. I saw, in large letters under the basketball picture, that Harry Zimmerman won first place in the foul shooting contest at Wooster. Debate attracted two of our classmates and Homer Miller and Marjorie Wright gained places as alternates. Turning the page, I saw that through all the trials of the exams and lessons which taunted and tempted us to leave and never come back, we were determined to go on and we hoped to meet the next year.

THE ANNUAL

I started on through the book but stopped suddenly at the caption, "Juniors." This time, after a few mishaps here and there, we had 28 in our class. Kathryn Lawton, from Rittman, was again back with us. This year a few minor changes had been made. James Patterson was again chosen president; Robert Thompson, vice president; Wayne Orr, treasurer; LaVonne Benjamin, secretary; and Harry Frey, class adviser. This year, I found, we needed a new inspiration to keep us going and soon the Study Room was seeing a red and white glow between the Sophomores and Seniors. Our first real opportunity came when we gave our class play. We presented "Mrs. Tubbs of Shantytown," which proved a great success. From the proceeds we banqueted the dignified Seniors at Wooster.

In baseball and basketball we were represented by the same boys as the year before. Leafing further, I saw that we took more interest in debate this year. Homer, Wayne, Glenn, and myself were among those selected to go out and argue with the other schools. We won first place in the county. Glenn represented the school in short story and won second place in county competition. Glenn, Homer, Leonard, and Christopher again answered the call of the spirit of music.

This year, we were getting to be more sound and basic in our education and we passed through with colors flying.

Next, I came to the word "Seniors!" How this word made a thrill go through me as I remembered those last school days. This time we elected new officers and Glenn Sonnedecker became president; Wayne Orr, vice president; Harold Henry, secretary-treasurer; and Harry Frey, class adviser. We were then on our last stretch. We were again represented in basketball and baseball.

In debate, six senior boys made the team. League competition was abandoned because of the scarlet fever epidemic. Glenn again represented us in short story. We gave our senior class play, "Here Comes Charlie," which was the greatest success of many years. We were banqueted, I saw on this page, by the Juniors, for which we were very appreciative.

Our annual, I saw by reading the next page, was a great success and we, the Seniors of 1934, feel proud, if perhaps unduly, of our record in our high school days.

I pored over other interesting pages and wondered where I had gotten this book. Upon looking at the cover, I recalled the day when I had worked on my Class History for the Class of 1934.

—HAROLD HENRY.

THE ANNUAL

Class Will

"Arise! His Honor, Judge Jones!" cried the court bailiff.

The student body of Creston High School arose. They had been assembled in the court room for the reading of the last will and testament of the class of 1934, who had passed from high school into that great beyond.

The Judge began reading: "We, the class of 1934, declare this to be our last will and testament and all former documents null and void! We also ask the court, if there need be an executor appointed, that Mr. Harry Frey be appointed to fulfill this position, without bond. We bequeath our unlimited knowledge, unshot paper wads and rubber bands to those of the student body who may desire them. (The faculty may have a little of the knowledge if they use it to a good advantage.)"

ARTICLE I

Section 1. To the Juniors, we give the back seats in the study hall. Please, however, don't carve any initials on them!

Section 2. To the Sophomores, we leave the honor of showing their dramatic art, and right to skip school without being suspended.

Section 3. We are sorry the Freshmen have failed to prove themselves capable of handling any benefits—and are therefore ineligible to be mentioned in this precious document.

ARTICLE II

In respect to the faculty for their help, in our time of need, we wish to bequeath the following:

- Item 1. To Mr. Himes, we bequeath our good wishes.
- Item 2. To Mr. Jeandrevin, we bequeath a group of seniors who will behave themselves in the back of the study hall the last period, without requiring his presence there.
- Item 3. To Miss Cahill, we bequeath an English IV class who will prepare their assignments before they go to class.
- Item 4. To Mr. Frey, we bequeath a few "big fellows" to play basketball.
- Item 5. To Miss Burgoon, we bequeath a French Class who will keep their assigned seats.
- Item 6. To Mr. Smith, we bequeath all of our bent nails.
- Item 7. To Mr. Young, we leave a bigger and better orchestra.

ARTICLE III

A few personal bequests:

- Item 1. Flossie Krause leaves her ability to draw a crowd of boys around her at noon, to LaVonne Conkey.
- Item 2. Chris Cameron leaves his ability to argue to Roy Amstutz.
- Item 3. To Darrell Bowman, Raymond Schlegel bequeaths some of his size.
- Item 4. Harry Zimmerman leaves his catching ability to Bud Stoll.
- Item 5. Betty Myers and LaVonne Benjamin leave their Rittman "dates" to any two Junior girls who can fill them.
- Item 6. Russell Schmollinger leaves his "hearty laugh" to Harvey Linder.
- Item 7. Glenn Sonnedecker leaves his ability of playing the sax to Roy Amstutz.
- Item 8. Harold Henry bequeaths his bass voice to Ira Kissinger.
- Item 9. To Paul Fike, Bob Thompson bequeaths his ability to get kicked out of classes.
- Item 10. To Ruth Haskins, Virginia Snyder leaves her diet book.
- Item 11. Irene Peake leaves her smile to Margaret Reis.
- Item 12. Betty Myers leaves her cheer leading ability to anyone in the Junior class who may need it.
- Item 13. Edna Gliem leaves a few of her "giggles" to Verda Metz.
- Item 14. Leonard Showalter leaves his ability to play the violin to Lee Dicus.
- Item 15. Thelma Lehman leaves her A grades to Margaret Sykes.

SIGNED BY SENIOR CLASS OF 1934.

Witnesses: Members of the Annual Staff.

Junior Class History

Dear Diary:

September:

I know you simply cannot imagine all the wonderful things we Juniors shall have to confide in you now that school has started.

Tonight, we took the Freshies on a roast to Shaw's woods. I'm sure they enjoyed themselves in spite of the fact that we deemed it necessary to use a little stove blackening on them to give a little "color" to initiation services. Plenty of "hot dogs" compensated a little.

Today, we organized, dear Diary, and elected Harvey Linder president; Roy Amstutz, vice president; Margaret Sykes, treasurer; Verda Metz, secretary; and Miss Cahill as our adviser. We decided to keep green and white as our class colors, and selected the sweet pea as our flower.

Tonight, the Freshies entertained us quite royally at the house of Katharine Fulton. It was a glorious night, so we played games on the lawn. And what quantities of ice cream and cake they served us!

October:

Tonight, we sponsored an old-fashioned Box Social after the regular P. T. A. meeting. What fun it was! Some of the boxes sold quite high considering we have a depression! So we made several dollars, one-third of which we gave to the P. T. A.

Hallowe'en—this is the occasion for our biggest activity up to date. Tonight, we sponsored a High School Party. Cornstalks, pumpkins, balloons, ghosts, and jack-o-lanterns decorated the "gym". Booths, containing side shows and food to sell, lined the walls. Whistles and masked students in costumes added to the festival air. Isabelle Buchanan and Russell Schmollinger received prizes for being the best costumed. The pop-corn, cider, pumpkin pies, hot dogs, and candy which we sold netted us a gain. But did we work!

December:

We were not actively interested in any particular thing last month—except Thanksgiving vacation. This month we are gay at the prospect of a ten-day Christmas Holiday. However, dear Diary, we are sad at the prospect of losing one of our class members. Russell Harris is moving to Coshocton. C. H. S. will miss both Russell and Carl!

Tonight, just a few days before Christmas, we gave the Harris's a farewell party. The Sophomores joined us in wishing them bon voyage.

January:

Dear Diary, the best we can say of this month is that we all suffered—and survived—mid-year exams.

We are also enjoying the basketball games. We are very proud to have five Juniors on the team—Kissinger, Rhoads, Ditch, Linder, and Stahl.

February:

Today, try-outs for Debate were held and Hazel Metz and Roy Amstutz made the team.

Dear Diary, I am so excited. Last night, I was fortunate enough, or the judges were kind enough, to give me second place in County Declamation. Lady Luck was surely my sponsor.

THE ANNUAL

Today, we selected our class play—"The Eighteen-Carat Boob."

March:

This month was interrupted by the closing of school for an indefinite time, due to the epidemic of scarlet fever. Thank goodness, none of us were victims.

April:

We gave the Junior Class Play and from it received enough remuneration to enable us to banquet our Senior friends.

May:

Dear Diary—So much is happening this month. Junior-Senior Banquet, at Wooster; Commencement, at which time we lose the class which—well, after all, in spite of the fact that they're Seniors, we'll rather miss them next year. C. H. S. won't be quite the same!

Speaking of next year, our final exams are facing us, which will tell the tale of whom of us will be dignified Seniors! Fond adieu, Dear Diary, until then. May we as a whole greet you next September, with all our important responsibilities which shall rest on our shoulders.

Sophomore Class History

With garnet and orange fluttering from the rudder, we the Sophomores of '36, on the fifth day of September, 1933, took off on the good plane C. H. S., enroute to the airport of Education.

Twenty-four of us, with passports in hand, began the second of the four-year flight to the "City of Graduation." Mr. Smith was the Pilot; Carl Harris, First Assistant; Zetta Shankland, Stenographer; Grace Grunder, Second Assistant; and Rena Feeman, Treasurer.

Contact made, the sputtering of the motor was the signal to begin the race with the other so-called dignified Juniors and Seniors. The first of our flight went fine, but after trying to avoid the larger planes, "Seniors" and "Juniors," we found ourselves lost in a terrible tail-spin of Six-Weeks Tests; but after a large zoom we again found that our plane had entered the "Path of Knowledge Beacon."

During our flight we landed safely six times on the "Island of Recreation" for parties. With the privileged Seniors as hostesses, a great number of guests enjoyed hot dogs. We, later, returned their hospitality. At the mid-year we were very unfortunate, because while flying south we had to land at Coshocton where we lost our First Assistant. The Juniors aided us in saying goodbye. We then discovered our banner to be rather tattered and old; so when we again took off, orange and white were fluttering in the breeze.

Carl Harris, Emerson Rugh, and Harry Moyer visited the "Land of Sport," and brought back many victories. Then to add to our experiences of fright, some of us nearly lost our lives in a nose-dive—"Final Exams."

However, regaining our courage we flew onward to the "City of Graduation," ending the second year of our flight with a very successful landing on "Vacation Island."

Freshman Class History

As we are all gathered together for the last time as Freshmen, I will read the happenings of the year:

Our first activity as Freshmen was the organization of our class. Miss Burgoon was chosen as faculty adviser; Raymond Arnold was elected president of our class; Flora Geitgey, vice president; and Verla Bricker, secretary-treasurer. We selected Lavender and Gold as our class colors.

About two weeks after school started the Junior class gave us a weiner roast in Hawk's woods. There, we were initiated into the mysteries of Creston High. The following Friday night we reciprocated with a party at the home of Kathryn Fulton.

On Hallowe'en we were invited to a party at the school house, sponsored by the Junior class. It was the first all-high school party of the year. At Christmas time, we gave a class party at the school house. This ended parties until mid-year exams were over. Almost all of the Freshmen passed these.

On Washington's Birthday we gave a chapel program. We also, with the aid of the Sophomores, sponsored a temperance play, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." This was given by the Smithville Players.

In athletics we were represented by Raymond Arnold on the basketball and baseball teams; also by Otto Glassnap, Harry Kissinger, Robert Shaffer, and Clare Blough on the basketball teams, Glassnap playing in the county tournament.

—CONDA SHUY.

Synopsis

A story of modern and fashionable life is revealed in this play. Larry Elliott, a true friend of everyone, loves his fiancée, Vivian Smythe-Kersey, very much, much to the joy of his aunt who could persuade Vivian to do anything she wished.

Larry promised old Bill Hopps to care for his child, whom he thought was a boy, and his old pardner, Aleck Twiggs. Charlie and Aleck arrived, much to the displeasure of his aunt and Vivian, who said she would not marry him if he continued this crazy plan. Nevertheless, Larry was very determined; so with the aid of his college mate, Ted Hartley, whom his aunt and fiancée disliked very much, managed to bring these people into his house. Charlie, discovered to be a girl, was very crude and they all were disgusted with her. Mrs. Smythe-Kersey, on being insulted by Uncle Aleck, said she would never come again. Her son Mortimer, who thought life very boring, found Charlie interesting—much to the disgust of his mother. Charlie, on having been accused of stealing, went away; however, Mrs. Farnham was the guilty one.

Charlie became quite sophisticated during her stay in New York and had many lovers—receiving marriage proposals from Ted, Mortimer, and Larry; but she loved only Larry. It ended in a happy love affair for these two.

Humor is added to the play by the antics of Uncle Aleck, in the guise of becoming a butler, and by the Irish maid's love affair.

THE ANNUAL

Synopsis

Alice Bisnette's gay summer house party, celebrating her wedding on the following day, is interrupted by a raw, gawky, hick-like country cousin of Daisy Bell. His coming creates excitement in a household already thrilled over the fact that a jewel thief known as "The Crow" is at large. Everyone falls under suspicion.

Moreover, complications arise in the love affair (?) of Alice and Raymond. A mysterious young man, Jack Merry, after many difficulties wins Alice.

Comedy is furnished by Kitty and Billy, Bud, and the two colored servants.

THE ANNUAL

Short Story

After the contest for the best short story was announced a great many contributions were submitted by the student body. From these "Strife in the Stratosphere," written by Glenn Sonnedecker, was chosen as the Creston entry in the county contest. County results are not known as yet. Last year Glenn's story placed second in county competition.

Declamation

Creston High was represented at the County Declamation Contest at Apple Creek, February 13, 1934, by Verda Metz, a member of the Junior class. A silver medal was awarded her for winning second place with her declamation, "On the Other Train."

THE ANNUAL

Debate Team

The Question: Resolved that the U. S. should adopt the essential features of the British system of radio operation and control.

The Affirmative team was composed of Christopher Cameron, Glenn Sonnedecker, and Harold Henry with Robert Thompson as Alternate; the Negative team of Leonard Showalter, Homer Miller and Roy Amstutz with Hazel Metz as alternate.

Although we made much preparation and held a practice debate early in the season, we were eliminated from league competition by the closing of school because of the scarlet fever epidemic.

Strife In The Stratosphere

The morning of April 4, 1934, dawned bright and clear! All was in readiness! The scientific instruments were installed and the sealed altimeter was in place. In another twenty-four hours would it register a new record—or a new failure?

This was a question Kendrick Dalton and Roland Cromwell had been spending days in preparation for answering. They had checked and rechecked their instruments, they had labored over the installation of the cosmic ray machine. Each day adverse weather reports had brought disappointment. But with the tragedy of the Russian air explorers fresh in their minds, these two sons of America, the pioneer nation, were without fear, to pioneer in the air. Accompanying almost super-mechanical preparations went silent and fervent prayers for suitable weather.

And this April dawn seemed to be the answer to the two youths' prayers. The huge gas bag swayed in the breeze, dwarfing the aluminum ball beneath it, in which Rol and Ken hoped to live for a day. Word had gone out that the day of days had arrived and people were swarming to the field—some because of curiosity, others because of keen interest.

Finally, the two young scientists crawled into the stratosphere balloon. The crowd was tense. This flight would herald either fame or death. Slowly the balloon arose from the earth, then faster and faster it ascended, as the gas expanded in the thinning atmosphere, until the blue and rose of the Spring dawn seemed to envelop this now toy-like balloon, silver, mixing with greying mists, was wafted towards infinity!

Inside the aluminum ball tense excitement reigned as the young adventurers busied themselves in their miniature laboratory. The altimeter registered 10,000 feet, then 20,000 feet! Now Rol and Ken were living by means of their artificial air system. Quickly the altimeter climbed—25,000 feet, 30,000 feet! All the various machines were in operation. Steadily clicked the cosmic ray machine, recording facts that had baffled man for centuries. At 35,000 feet, they were still rising, but a strong Southwest wind was buffeting them.

Suddenly, Roland shouted excitedly, "Ken, we're making it! We're MAKING it!"

All human operations seemed to cease as they riveted their eyes on the altimeter, which was recording their height. Simultaneously they shouted, "We've broken the record!"

Radio flashed the message to the waiting world. Eagerly they gazed out the port holes! What a thrill! Below, huge banks of rolling, white, fleecy clouds parted now and then to give them a view of Mother Earth—its curvature being plainly visible. Above, surrounding them, was nothing but space—a blue-gray expanse of—emptiness!

But there was not time for such unscientific observations. Important work must be done. Rol took reading after reading from scientific instruments and pictures with their sensitive cameras. Bob kept in radio contact with the earth and entered observations every fifteen minutes into their history-making diary. So absorbed were they that both failed to notice the quick passage of time. Ten hours had elapsed since their take-off. Suddenly Rol—he could scarcely breathe! His lungs were on fire and his head seemed bursting! A great weight was pressing him down—down. . . . Something was wrong with the air system!

Consciousness began to go, but Bob weakly lifted himself to the oxygen tanks. Three-fourths full! What could the matter be? They could only survive a few more minutes. Making a great effort he succeeded in opening the small door to the valves and tubes. A veil of mist seemed to be covering his eyes, but through the fog of his brain, habit and his thorough knowledge of the apparatus, led him to the most likely places of trouble, the nitrogen and oxygen lines. He tested the nitrogen lines. All O.K.; valves working; tubes open; and plenty of pressure! Next, the oxygen—tubes open; valves—"But what was this?" With weak, nervous fingers Ken fumbled at the valve. It was stuck! Unconsciousness at this time overtook him and without a sound he fell in a heap! But a soft hissing sound began to fill the ball and air once more began circulating. The force of his weight in falling had pulled open the valve which his fingers had been clutching. All was well in the silver sphere!

Slowly they regained consciousness and began to breathe normally. Although very weak, they began to catch up with their work. Precious minutes had been lost. So for eight hours they worked like Trojans! They were now beginning to descend with nothing but that one harrowing experience to mar their flight. They were bringing down with them data, priceless to Compton and men of that profession. To themselves they were bringing fame!

Thirty-five thousand feet! Thirty thousand feet, now twenty-five thousand! Soon they would once more be on the good "terra firma." Their weary smiles were those of knowledge of a work well done. Their smiles were suddenly erased from their faces as a terrific lurch of the gondola sent them sprawling. The metal cabin was being whipped about like a toy in the teeth of this terrific gale. By an occasional flash of lightning, black clouds could be seen churning all about them. Suddenly—a sickening snap!

"God," cried Ken, "we're breaking loose from the gas bag!"

His eyes were wide with horror as he grasped the hand rail in the crazily tilted cabin. Rol was as white as snow, but kept a grip on himself.

"Don't give up the ship yet, old man." He yelled above the wind.

Now they were hovering lower over the earth and the storm had abated, but almost instantly it sprang up again in all its fury.

Soon, two more snaps—two more cables broken! The remaining moorings would not hold the heavy metal ball for long in the storm!

Just as dawn was breaking the storm abated as quickly as it had arisen, and they were once more being gently lowered to earth.

Where had the storm carried them? Exhaustedly crawling to a port-hole, Rol made ready to feast his eyes, once again on soil, but with a gasp he sank back. Curiously Ken gazed below and to his amazement saw nothing but miles of rolling waves—the cold, dark waves of the Atlantic. Dashing to the other side he looked hopefully down. Disappearing in the distance could be seen land, the good old U. S. A. Were they after their experiences in the air to die the death allotted a sailor? Only a few hundred feet above the water, in the early morning light they could see no craft of any description. Donning the life preservers, carried for such an emergency, they prepared to jump when the metal ball struck the water. But what were their chances? Until some fisherman picked them up they would surely be dead, for they could not live long in that open, choppy sea in their weakened condition.

But back along the shore an old fisherman sat mending his nets in the early dawn. Happening to look up, he thought he saw something drifting overhead. Then the rays of the rising sun caught the silver of the ball and reflected its message. The old sailor gazed at this strange apparition wending its way seaward, then he thought of the smiling faces of the two stratosphere explorers in the previous day's newspaper. Hurriedly knocking the ashes from his pipe the old sea dog warmed up the engine of his motor boat. Then headed out to the open sea, following the huge balloon. When almost a mile distant, he saw the two airmen jump and the heavy metal ball settle slowly beneath the waves. Down into the sea went the priceless data and equipment for which the young pioneers had risked all in the stratosphere to gain. Once more the elements had conquered man's ambition to solve the mysteries of the world beyond the clouds.

Little Harry Frey, cutting across lots on his way to school, had to cross a fence and he tore his pants. He had one safety pin with which he pinned them. He arrived at school late and the teacher said, "Harry! I see you're behind." Blushing, Harry replied, "I know, but if I had another safety pin you wouldn't."

OPPORTUNITIES for High School Graduates

The Oberlin School of Commerce congratulates you upon completing your high school course this year, and we are happy to send you this message. Suppose that just after you graduate, a good position — a position offering splendid opportunity for promotion and salary — were offered you: could you fill it, or would they be obliged to pass you by for someone with more technical training?

In these times, more than ever, the best trained people are being selected for the better positions. Put yourself in line for the better opportunities and make certain of position, promotion, income, etc., by taking a high-grade business training.

The Oberlin School of Commerce can help you in planning your course and give you that broader and better business training that is being demanded of young people. We have trained thousands of young men and women for business, office, and secretarial positions, who are now filling prominent places all over the country. If interested, write for information about our Secretarial or Business Administration courses.
